

Destiny (The Shower Song)

by Roland Albertson

Take me now, please take me as I am,
I am just a lonesome, average man.
But babe I've seen, my destiny,
And I will find, my way there if you'll please.

So tell me now, please tell me if I can,
I can't say for sure, from where I stand.
But in my heart, the courage you will find,
And in my soul, the reason there behind.

'Cos I have angels, resting on my shoulders,
And right beside, the demons all watch over.
And they all see, the real me,
Yes all my glories, and my darkest deeds.

But now I see, and know just who I am,
What I need, they help me understand.
But babe I feel, you're all I ever need,
'Cos I can't breathe, without you near.

'Cos I have angels, resting on my shoulders,
And they provide, me guidance and assurance.
You'll help me there, they told me in my dreams,
That you're the one, the only one for me.

Cos I have angels, resting on my shoulders,
And there they'll stay, until my days are over.
And I don't know, just why they care for me,
But I sure hope, they never leave.
