Find Your Own

by Roland Albertson

I'm walkin' down the road and I can't see where I've gone
I'm walkin' 90 miles an hour in the wrong direction
Yeah where will I go, where will I stay
I need something now to help me on my way
Still you tell me that
I'm still strong

I said
Free your mind in your open time
You might just find that you're not alone
When you take your soul on that open road
It can't be sold, no it can't be sold, come now

Can't say you're strong enough yet
Can't say you're on the top yet
You know, you know you want it
Don't stop until you've got it
Can't say you're strong enough yet
Can't say you found yourself
You'll chase it and then fight it
Until you find your own ... yeah
Until you find your own

Now that I've seen all things that life has to give
I realise I'm just a part of our existence
Just another link in the chain of things
Trying to make it come together in the end
Still you tell me that
I'm still strong

Still I see, all you there
Making stupid faces, playing games with aces
Still I see all you there
All the time
